Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 07 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Cloudier overnight, with some rain. Wet and windy for Thursday.

This Evening and Tonight:
A largely dry evening with a few showers in the south, perhaps wintry over the hills. However, cloud amounts will increase from the northwest overnight with some rain developing, which could be heavy at times. Temperatures rising through the night. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Thursday:
A wet start but tending to become drier and a little brighter through the afternoon. Windy, with gales around the coasts and over the hills. Milder than of late. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Feeling cold or very cold for the next three days. Wintry showers for Friday and Saturday, turning drier with occasional sunny spells on Sunday. Widespread frosts overnight, especially Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.